Evansville, May 14th, 1832.
All householders, manufacturers, merchants, shopkeepers, and others, occupying promises within the limits of the city, are reminded that all obstructors and accumulations of filth are strictly forbidden by the Ordinances of the City. All parsons are therefore requisted to examine their premises and the adjacent alleys and gutters, and remove therefor meverything prejudicial to the convenience or health of the public.

In order to protect the health of the citzens from the evil consequence resulting from accumulations and deposits of filth, public notice has herstofore been given, and in many instances personal notice has been served by the Marshal, but in many cases these notices have been wholly disparded. This final notice is therefore given in the hope that all persons will at once examine their premises, and, by removing just causes of complaint, avoid the consequences of a resent to legal proceedings.
